Research

- Basis Social - seven face-to-face focus groups - adults aged 55+ living across different parts of England, and according to a range of demographic characteristics.
 - Kantar Public – desktop research - consumer demand, affordability, stimulating supply, and uptake of various OPH models.
 - Strategic Planning Research Unit - analysed over 2,210 OPH planning applications (understanding of the patterns and trends in success or otherwise)

The state of older people's housing in England today

Our older population is growing and becoming more diverse. Over 65's are 18.6% of our pop'n (up 2% points in ten years) with 8% born outside the UK.

We need an estimated 30-50,000 new later living homes per annum to meet this growth – but only build around 7,000 a year

Nearly 9 in 10 people aged 65-79 live in under-occupied housing, with over 50% living in homes with two or more excess bedrooms

New research by the Taskforce shows current private leasehold OPH options are unaffordable for the majority of English households aged 75 years and over.

Around 0.6% live in Housing with Care in the UK – a tenth of the proportion in more mature markets such as the USA, Australia and New Zealand.

The vast majority of over 65s - more than nine out of ten - currently live in mainstream housing – risk individual health benefits of OPH & potential to save costs due to avoidable hospital admissions.

Only 12% of older people had level access at the entrance of their building; less than half a bathroom on the entry level of their home.

Older people are unaware of the options available to them and admit to 'burying their heads' as to their future housing needs.

Recommendations

Our full report dedicates a chapter to each of the following recommendations. We set out detailed actions under each – actions for Government, the Industry and Local Systems – with the evidence and stakeholder insight underpinning them.

Standardise definitions of OPH/LLH

(Chapter 1) – Because to enable partnership working across the private and public sectors and to build public understanding of what's available, we need to be speaking the same language.

Incentivise a wide range of OPH/LLH options

(Chapter 2) – Because older people in the UK are not a homogenous group. They are highly diverse in their needs, wishes, backgrounds and identities. Meaningful choice must be available and accessible to all.

Ensure more housing is designed for later life

(Chapter 3) – Because we need to optimise the design of all forms of OPH, to improve the accessibility of new build mainstream housing, and make existing mainstream housing more suitable for older people.

Create age-friendly, dementia-inclusive, faith and culture-sensitive communities

(Chapter 4) – Because the community beyond the front door - the built environment, local infrastructure, communities and mutual support - enables people to live independently and well.

Expand OPH/LLH at scale and ensure it is affordable to live in, and viable to finance, build and operate (Chapter 5) – Because to increase supply, we need to create greater incentives for private investment, including capital support; thereby enabling a more affordable 'low to middle affluence market'.

Strengthen planning policies

(Chapter 6) – Because national and local planning policy and practice can incentivise and accelerate the development of new specialised housing; and help shape mainstream housing and the built environment to be more age-friendly.

Establish a national information platform and local hubs

(Chapter 7) – Because for people to take up options they must first understand what they offer, what would best meet their needs, the health benefits and how to take them up. Accurate and trusted sources are vital.

Build consumer confidence

(Chapter 8) – Because to increase demand we need to build consumer trust and confidence in a range of OPH tenures; and to increase supply we need to provide regulatory clarity for investors, developers and operators. A new regulated Tenure would enable protection and incentive, if designed well.

Enhance innovation, research and professional development

(Chapter 9) – Because there are gaps in our knowledge of older people's needs and what works to meet them. A strategic approach is needed to generate and embed the greatest value from private and publicly funded research, with an increase in funding for the latter.

Create collective leadership to drive change

(Chapter 10) – Because to achieve a step change, we need to inspire and empower ambitious action, from the top of Government and outwards to communities and families. We need to fully integrate housing, health & social care at all levels of the system

Call for a Long-term Housing Strategy for an Ageing Population, that promotes all types of age-friendly, dementia-inclusive, faith and culture-sensitive homes/communities and calls the integration of housing, health and social care to enable its delivery.
To achieve this, everyone needs to:

housing

The OPHT report recommended that professionals within the Health & Social Care sectors need to think housing. Incorporate housing in broader DHSC policies

Address
ageing

Housing and Place-making should be designed to meet the needs of a genuinely ageing population. Delivery of homes for younger families is helpful but freeing up under occupied homes would be significantly more beneficial if more age-appropriate homes are delivered.

Promote wellbeing

Housing and public realm must support both physical and mental health. Principles of activity should specifically aim to connect the community and minimise social isolation.

Create
communities

Foster communities that are accessible, inclusive and supportive. New settlements, urban extensions and urban mixed-use developments should foster principles of inclusivity outlined in Chapter 4 of the OPHT report.

Centre piece of housing policy

How OPHT report fits with Government's Five Missions

1. Kickstart economic growth – to drive growth, rebuild Britain for ageing population, support good jobs, unlock investment, and improve living standards across the country.
 2. Make Britain a clean energy superpower through delivering clean power by 2030 and accelerating to net zero – modernising old homes & building new.
 3. Take back our streets by halving serious violent crime and raising confidence in the police and criminal justice system to its highest levels – safe, age-friendly & inclusive communities.
 4. Break down barriers to opportunity by reforming our childcare and education systems, to make sure there is no class ceiling on the ambitions of our young people – new jobs in Housing, Health & Social Care.
 5. Build an NHS fit for the future that is there when people need it, where everyone lives well for longer – connected communities would reduce cost for NHS and need for Social Care.
